Republican County Convention.

The Republicans of Pottawattamie county will meet in delegate convention at the court house in Council Bluffs, Thursday, September 13, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following offices...

Table with 2 columns: Name and Precinct. Lists names like Kane, 1st precinct, 5; Kane, 2d precinct, 8; Kane, 3d precinct, 7; Kane, 4th precinct, 9; Boomer, 2; Belknap, 3; Crescent, 2; Carson, 3; Center, 4; Grove, 3; Garner, 2; Hardin, 2; Hagedell, 2; James, 3; Knox, 6; Keg Creek, 2.

The primaries in each township, unless otherwise ordered by the township committee, will be held Monday, September 10, at 7 p. m. By order of JOHN W. BAIRD, Chairman Co. Rep. Cen. Com.

MINOR MENTION.

See Joseph Reiter's fall goods.

Cheap Railroad Tickets at Bushnell's. Additional local on seventh page.

Officer Clough is still on the sick list.

The water works boys got paid off Saturday.

The city council will make another try for a quorum to-night.

Rev. A. K. Bates, of Lima, N. Y., preached at the Presbyterian church yesterday.

Officers Leonard and Barhyte brought William Richardson to the calaboose because of a Saturday spree.

Mr. A. W. Ames has purchased an interest in the establishment lately under the title of Hardin, Skelton & Co.

The Baptist social, which was to have taken place Friday evening, was postponed until Saturday evening on account of the rain.

Mr. Johnson, the proprietor of the Little Windsor, is now suffering from a broken arm, the result of falling from a step ladder.

The horse belonging to Mr. Damon has been found by a boy who returned it. Now buggy and horse are both back but the harness is missing.

The annual convention of the Women's Christian Temperance union of the Ninth congressional district, will be held in Omaha September 6th and 6th.

It is understood that Mrs. Ellinger, whose husband was killed by the cars last week, is taking steps to begin suit against the company for damages.

Mrs. Benedict addressed an audience of ladies at the Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon, in the interest of the home for fallen women, at Des Moines.

We are informed that Miss Florence Wilson, a former teacher at this place, has secured a position as teacher in the deaf and dumb asylum at Council Bluffs. —[The Macedonian.]

Special attention is called to the advertisement of the coming fair, found in another column. Council Bluffs presents the biggest attractions, and will have the best show of any of them.

The circuit court disposed of but one case Saturday, that being the divorce case of Sweat vs. Sweat, in which a decree was granted. Adjudgment was then taken until to-morrow morning.

A change was made in the police force yesterday, by which Officer Cusick goes on duty and Officer Mullen changes to night duty again. L. Darrell is also serving as a police officer, the force being short by Clough's illness and Warner's suspension.

Thomas Bowman, the tailor who was arrested for creating a disturbance at Joseph Reiter's place, was discharged Saturday, the evidence being that he was taking away some property that belonged to him, and that he did not disturb the peace.

There is to be a meeting of the board of trade this evening. It is to be hoped that enough interest will be shown to secure a quorum, as there are matters of importance to be considered. The board has been very sleepy of late, and it is time there was a waking up.

Two boys recently sneaked about $10 worth of knives out of Empkie's hardware store. Word is now received that they have been captured by Sheriff Dan Farrell, who has taken them to Glenwood. Detective Edgar has been sent out to get them and bring them back.

Late copies of Des Moines papers have much to say about the Herdica and all speak very favorably of the enterprise. Des Moines has well paved streets, and that they can run there, and there is every indication now that they will be very liberally patronized by the public.

One of the boarders at the Creston house met with a slight accident Saturday night. While sitting in front of the hotel a window up stairs fell, breaking the glass, and as he looked up to see what the matter was a piece of glass dropped, striking him on the forehead and cutting a gash from which the blood flowed freely.

A man named Henry had his watch stolen about six weeks ago. Saturday he was in Goldstone's pawn shop, inquiring prices of watches, when he was shown his own watch. He quietly stepped over to the superior counter, got a search warrant, and had the watch turned over to him by the Judge. Mr. Goldstone explains that he had bought the watch of a stranger, and did not know that it was stolen.

Constable Fox was sent out with a warrant for the arrest of one W. M. Smith, for assaulting M. A. Armstrong, manager of the Union elevator. Fox got his man safely shut up with him in a closed carriage, fine style, when Smith suddenly opened the door, stepped out of the carriage, coolly bade the officer good-night, and went off. Constable Fox ought to have another medal.

Miss Jennie Cannon, a sister of Miss Mollie Cannon of this city, died at the residence of another sister, Mrs. S. F. Goodwin, at Marshalltown, on Thursday last, of consumption, with which she had suffered for a year past. The remains were brought to this city Saturday and the funeral services held at the Catholic church. They were largely attended, the family having many friends in this city.

H. C. Mason was arrested and brought before Justice Schurz on Saturday, charged with assaulting C. B. Johnson, the latter having a heavily draped eye to bear silent testimony against him. He pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs. After getting off this lightly, he made a great kick about the cost being too high, they amounting to about $5. Later in the day another information was filed against him in the superior court, charging him with disturbing the peace.

Something should be done about the Parrott family who for several days have been squatting on a vacant lot at the corner of Sixth avenue and Ninth street. There are eleven of these houseless and destitute ones there, with only a slim excuse of a tent to keep off drenching rains. The lot is low, and covered with weeds. The man is either sickly or shiftless or both, the mother is in a very destitute condition and needing tender care just now, and the whole condition of affairs is such as to demand the attention of the authorities.

There have been a number of dog poisoning cases lately. There are many dogs in the city, or curs, which are a great nuisance and ought to be removed, but this is such a sneaky way, and valuable dogs are so often the victims, instead of worthless ones, that much indignation has been caused. Yesterday a resident of Vine street, who owns a valuable dog, noticed a man calling his dog, and then throw him a piece of meat. The man got the meat before the dog did, and is having it tested to see whether it is poisoned or not, and if it proves to be poisoned, it seems to be, there will be music in the air, as the man who threw the meat is known.

An indignant correspondent at Panama sent to The Bee a detailed account of the ungentlemanly act of one of the young society men of that place, who had arranged for escorting a young lady to the circus in Council Bluffs. The young man's father is said to have had some objections, and either this fact or something else caused the young man to change his mind, and he left the young lady at her depot, while he jumped the train and went off to the show. The correspondent says the friends of the young lady are very indignant about the matter, and have so taken it to heart that the young man, instead of returning home, as expected, is staying away until the threatened cyclone has passed.

Charles E. Phils, of Maryville, Mo., a veteran who helped greatly to make things lively at the reunion here, was in the city Saturday with posters and flyers and plenty of talk about the coming reunion of the Southwestern Iowa and the Northwestern Missouri Veteran association, to be held at Maryville, September 25, 26 and 27. General Logan, General Cockrell and others are to be there to orate. A grand street parade is arranged for, and besides the camp fires, guard mounting, drilling, dress parades, etc., there is to be a sham battle. Good quarters and cooked rations are promised. All of the boys are expected to join organized companies or be assigned to them on arrival. Each is expected to furnish himself with a blanket, plate, knife, fork and spoon. The "boys in gray" have been secured on railways. Master rolls will be furnished on application to Adj. S. K. Rowley, Maryville, Mo.

Joseph Holzer, who has a tailoring establishment near the Revere house, has been greatly annoyed by the fact that a Mrs. Brown has a house of ill-repute close by. He has had considerable difficulty with her, and she is now under $100 bonds to keep the peace toward him. Saturday the matter was again in court, an information being filed against Stephen Dunn, who lives in the country, for leasing the house to a prostitute. The prosecution failed to show that Dunn owned the house or that he leased it to Mrs. Brown, or that he knew the character of the place she was keeping. Mrs. Brown was then put on trial for keeping a house of ill-fame, but the prosecution failed to show that she was the keeper of the house, there being three or more women who occupied it, any one of whom might be the keeper for all the evidence showed. She was discharged.

Holzer was then given the very startling advice by the young man who acted for the city attorney in the latter case, that if he wanted to make out a case he ought to hire some attorney and pay him well to fight it for him. It seems strange that a man doing a legitimate business must submit to the annoyance of having a woman doing an illegitimate business next door to him, and when he appeals to the city authorities to remove the nuisance to be informed that he must get his own attorney. It is supposed that the city employs and pays a man to prosecute such cases. Where is that man?

J. W. Rodefer having been elected secretary and treasurer of the Mercantile Loan, Trust and Improvement company of Council Bluffs, has accepted the position and assumed the management of the company's business. The following named persons are on the board of directors: T. A. Kirkland, C. S. Leferts, J. W. Rodefer, I. A. Miller, E. L. Shugart, T. A. Kirkland, President.

The Des Moines Register in speaking of the meeting of the board of trustees of the institution for the deaf and dumb, says: "Mr. Rogers has held the position for the past three years, and his administration is commended in the highest term by the trustees. He leaves the asylum, as the report will show, in the best condition it has ever been. The board is loth to relinquish his services, but he has fully determined upon returning to the clerical calling from whence he was taken. He is a minister of the Congregational faith. It is understood that Prof. Hammond, superintendent of the Arkansas institution for the deaf and dumb, has been tendered the vacancy, and his wife the position of matron. Prof. Hammond has had twenty years experience in that kind of work in various states, and is known to have excellent qualifications for the place."

It has since been fully decided upon that Prof. Hammond is to have the position. Rev. Mr. Rogers will retain the position until his successor has time to adjust matters at the Arkansas institution, which will probably be several weeks. Dr. West, dentist, 14 Pearl street.

A POINTED QUESTION.

Rev. Mr. Armstrong Chooses It for the Text of His Sermon.

Rev. Mr. Armstrong, the pastor of the Broadway Methodist church, yesterday morning gave his congregation an earnest sermon on "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

In opening he dwelt upon the importance of will power, and that all men had to have their wills broken at times. They were forced to submit to the will of other men in many earthly matters. One of the great reasons for the strength of the St. Francis society, was that its organizer broke the wills of its followers, and made them submit to his will. One monk, who had almost as strong a will as St. Francis, refused to yield, and after every person had been brought to hear, a grave eight feet deep was dug, and the monk was placed upright in this. Dirt was shoveled in until he was buried to his knees. He was then asked if he would yield, and still refused. Then more dirt was thrown in, and the question repeated, with a like answer. It was not until the monk was all buried except his head, that he gave up. The speaker doubted whether this mere physical force ever thoroughly broke a man's will, and it was not through fear that the will of a man could be best subjected to God's will. Love was what was needed to make man's will step aside for God's will. Then man cheerfully did what God desired.

The question in the text was not "Lord, what wilt thou have other men do?" It was too frequently the case that men wanted to know what others should do, and were very ready to tell others what they ought to do. They should seek to know what they themselves ought to do. If each would ask the question individually, for himself or herself, and do whatever duty came in answer to the question, the church would be a great power. There was great power in concentrated thinking and acting. Generals were not the ones that won a battle. Victory came by each man being at his post and obeying the orders given him. Churches grew not because of big preachers, but by each member doing his duty. A minister once asked a deacon to lead in prayer. The deacon replied, "Why, sir, we here you to do the praying." Too many had that idea, that the ministers must do the praying. It was not true. The members must do their own praying, and must do individual duty.

There was much latent power in every church. The man had been laughed at much who stood at Niagara Falls, and when asked if it was not a grand sight, replied, "Yes, but what a lot of machinery could be run by that power." The speaker often felt in looking at grand churches what a power they might be. Two weeks ago he was in Chicago, and in attending Centenary church, the great Methodist church of the west side, he was strongly impressed with the fact of latent power. There was a great congregation, an elegant church, finely dressed gentlemen and ladies there, also pews, and yet such a deadness and formality to the service. They looked pious enough, but when a stranger chanced to be in their pew, some of these had the usher show him out. Would Christ have crowded out a stranger, who was hungering for spiritual food? The sight of this church had given him inspiration for this speaking earnestly of the necessity of calling out the latent power of the church.

The question used for the text was not "Lord what wilt Thou have me do or say?" Doctrines were important, but were equally so. Doctrines were the skeletons for the flesh, the frames for the pictures, the poles for vines to climb on. Too many Christians had in their hearts, and just on the right side to get close to do anything, as though a Christian should have a right and wrong side. A boot-black remarked, "Jim is a good fellow, if you get on the right side of him." Another replied, "Yes, but the wrong side reaches so far around him that there isn't much risk in getting close to him." There were too many church members this way, who needed to be rounded out until the right side was all around, and they stand ready to be approached at any time with any duty.

E. J. Davis having moved from Pearl street, can now be found at 129 South Main street, where she has a fine stock of fancy goods and notions.

BACK TO DES MOINES.

The Full Details of the Trouble Which Led to the Capture of a Capital City Young Man Here.

The young man Randlett, who was arrested here on telegraphic orders from Des Moines, excited some curiosity here. It was given over by the officers that he was wanted for jumping a board bill, and just as City Marshal Smith, of Des Moines, left with the prisoner he whispered "till-tapping." The following full details of the young man's case are given by The Leader:

On last Sunday morning R. W. Randlett, a young man who tends bar for F. W. Zoersch, who keeps the saloon on the corner of Sixth and Walnut streets, went down, as was his custom, to scrub out the saloon and otherwise place it in good condition for the Monday business. At about 9 o'clock, after everything had been nicely cleaned, Mr. Zoersch told him he might go home and rest, and told him not to return to the saloon during the day. He went away, but as soon as the proprietor had gone, he returned with a companion, and entering the saloon they began drinking the liquor and eating the lunch that had been prepared for Monday. They staid there most of the day and managed to get outside of a good deal of the contents of the shop. In the afternoon Randlett began to think of leaving town, and left his companion in the saloon while he went to the house for his valise. Upon inquiry he found he could not leave town until 7 o'clock Monday morning. He returned to the saloon and spent the night there and left next morning on the before mentioned train. When Mr. Zoersch came to the saloon in the morning he found everything in confusion and the money all taken from the drawer and the best of his liquors gone. He informed the officers and by telegraphing Randlett was arrested at Council Bluffs and an officer sent here to bring him down. His trial came off yesterday before Police Judge Hill, who sentenced him to thirty days in jail. Randlett denies taking the money, but says his companion took it in his absence.
